BLOOD TELLS

Good blood tells, they say, and bad blood certainly does. Poor and disordered blood tells its own story in lowered vitality, loss of energy, in skin eruptions, rheumatic pains, and in a pallid or sallow appearance of the complexion.

This is the season of the year when the blood is most apt to be disordered. Take our SANSAPARILLA COMPOUND. It purifies and enriches the blood. It cures boils, pimples and other skin troubles. It expels rheumatic poison from the system. It builds up strength and energy. Price 75c at

HIS WIFE'S TRIUMPH.

A Memento That Was Inspiring to John Richard Green.

It has been the fate of many men of letters to have ill health bearing them down as they struggle on toward literary achievements. Thus best in recent times were Stevenson, Richard Jefferies and J. R. Green. Each of these, it happened, had a high hearted wife to keep him up, even to help him with the actual labor of writing. "The Life and Letters of J. R. Green" show forth a great and sweet man. They show, too, a wife whose sympathy and fortitude helped to make his accomplishment possible.

In copying the vast amount of manuscript of her husband's books Mrs. Green contracted writer's cramp and was forced to stop using her right hand. This looked like a final obstacle in the way of the invalid, who did much of his thinking in bed and could not write himself. But Mrs. Green set to work at once learning to write with her left hand.

One of her first practice pages, which she was about to destroy with the rest, her husband took quietly and put in his pocket. Years afterward when ill health seemed unbearable and in discouragement he felt that he could not work he used to take out that piece of paper, a living record of his wife's triumph over difficulty. When he saw the painful, patient strokes by which Mrs. Green had learned to write with her left hand he could work on with something near to inspiration.

Poison of the Centipede.

The centipede is popularly supposed to carry a sting on each foot, but I have several times handled one after its head was removed without the claws producing any result. It is the first pair of claws only that are venomous, being like a scorpion's fang. The largest I ever saw was eleven inches in length, a grown-up creature. A bite from one of this size would most likely have been fatal to a man in weak health. The tarantula, though its powers of offense are nothing like those of the scorpion or centipede, is, however, a more unappealing character than either. The horror of these large spiders entertained by many people is curious and unaccountable. I have seen Australian bushmen, who in everyday life scarcely seemed to understand danger, turn white as a sheet at the sight of a small "tarantula," as they called it.—Chambers' Journal.

Dairy Figures.

The dairy population of the United States is about 21,000,000, or one cow to every five people. The average yield, according to official figures, is only about 3,500 pounds a year, or roughly, five quarts a day on the average. It is figured that each person in the country eats about twenty pounds of butter each year. Very little butter is imported.
